Master of Vocation

in Security and Surveillance

About the Programme

Private Security Services are an emerging sub-sector in the service sector. Though the main focus of private security is physical security, but this profession also exposes the personnel to the nuances of electronic security & surveillance, cyber security and disaster management. The demand of private security personnel is growing, hence there is a good scope of placement and employment for the trained manpower. M.Voc. (Security & Surveillance) shall prepare the students to undertake the role and responsibilities of a Security Officer, to be able to coordinate multiple deployments & operations of a security unit; carry out operations & training of security personnel and ensure security of premises & loss prevention by employing physical & electronic security techniques.

Programme Model & Pedagogy

SVSU has built a strong partnership with the Industry to facilitate students' training, employability and entrepreneurship through the On-the-Job Training (OJT) approach. The university has designed, developed and deployed Industry Integrated Dual Education Model (IIDEM) that enables students to "earn-while-learn" and provides an opportunity to enhance their qualification with the flexibility of entry and exit into a programme. SVSU has conceptualised the IIDEM programme, which is designed in such a manner that 60 percent of the credits are earned while working on the OJT and the rest 40 percent come from the theoretical and conceptual training. The entire pedagogy is designed to develop an application-based learning that makes students job-ready by earning industry work experience and learning the technical concepts hands-on.
